INTRODUCTION

The Women's College Coalition is pleased to be able to offer this second Profile of Women's Colleges as an update and expansion of our earlier data book. We hope it will prove useful to all those in the higher education community with an interest in the status of women in that community and in women's colleges in specific. We were both surprised and delighted by the volume of requests for Profile I and hope that this new effort will prove even more useful in documenting various aspects of the nation's 116 women's colleges.

For those unfamiliar with the Data Collection Project of the Women's College Coalition, some explanation of our activities is in order. The Project, supported by a two-year grant from the Ford Foundation was initiated in 1979 to develop a data base on women's colleges. Most groups within the higher education community can document and evaluate their performance according to a number of variables across a wide range of issues. Women's colleges, however, have only rarely been identified as a separate reporting category by the major education data gatherers of either the public or the private sector. Consequently, while there has been in recent years a growing interest in the learning and working environment provided to women at women's colleges, there has been no increasing capacity to document and describe that environment.

In response, the Women's College Coalition project of the Association of American Colleges has undertaken a number of special studies designed to provide basic descriptive data on the nation's undergraduate colleges for women. Publications issuing from the Data Collection Project include: A Profile of Women's Colleges (May, 1980), and Analysis of the Data (June, 1980); A Study of the Learning Environment at Women's Colleges (Spring, 1981) and Highlights of the Study (Spring, 1981); Profile II: A Second Profile of Women's Colleges (Summer, 1981) and Profile II: Analysis of the Data (Summer, 1981). With the exception of Profile I, which this publication effectively replaces, all publications are available upon request from the Women's College Coalition.

The data presented in the Second Profile of Women's Colleges were acquired from the major education data collectors with women's colleges being disaggregated from the larger samples. The prime sources of data include the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) whose HEGIS survey was a chief resource; the Council for Financial Aid to Education (CFAE); the American Council on Education (ACE); the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities (NIICU); and the Cooperative Institutional Research Program (CIRP). Although this publication is intended to provide primarily descriptive data limited to the group of women's colleges, comparative data have also been included where they proved easily available.

In addition to including current information published previously in Profile I, this Second Profile of Women's Colleges builds on and expands the earlier volume. For the first time, we have available an entire decade of ENROLLMENT TRENDS (1970-1980) and a number of new subsets within the larger group of women's colleges. We have updated the information on STUDENT CHARACTERISTICS and VOLUNTARY SUPPORT. New FACULTY DATA was added from the Coalition's Learning Environments survey. Finally, a new study of FINANCIAL INFORMATION related to women's colleges was developed to reflect the impact of inflation on these institutions.

Many people deserve thanks for their support and contributions to this Second Profile of Women's Colleges. Among them are Mariam Chamberlain of the Ford Foundation, without whose sensitivity and active encouragement this project would not have been possible; Martha Church, President of Hood College and

Chair of the Women's College Coalition Data Collection Project Advisory Committee, who has skillfully guided the project from its inception; Sister Dorothy Ann Kelly, President of the College of New Rochelle and Chair of the Women's College Coalition; and the members of the Data Project Advisory Committee--Sr. Judith Cagney, President of Barat College; Carol Frances, Chief Economist of the Economics and Finance Unit of the American Council on Education; Jeanne Block, Research Psychologist at the University of California, Berkeley; Virginia Hodgkinson, Director of Research at the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities; and Alice Emerson, President of Wheaton College. Special thanks are due as well to those who donated their time, resources, and expertise to the project. Chief among these are Paula Knepper, Director of Statistical Research at the American Council on Education, and Elizabeth Tidball, whose sustained research on women's colleges has done so much to focus attention on the importance of studying these particular institutions.

II. A List of Women's Colleges and Universities of the United States

WOMEN'S COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES OF THE UNITED STATES

The following is a list of 116 women's colleges and universities in the United States. The list is based on data collected by the National Beta Club (Spartanburg, South Carolina), and published in their College Facts Chart 1980-81. This list has been corrected and updated by the Women's College Coalition except where no current data was available (indicated by an *).

For the purposes of this study, any institution is classified as a college for women if the institution chooses to identify itself in its catalogue or other materials and mission statements as a women's college.

In the interest of presenting data on comparable institutions, this list does not include institutions for women "organized as profit making" (of which there are 6). Nor does the list include teacher preparatory colleges or seminaries (of which there are 11). For reference purposes, both groups are listed below.

FOR PROFIT INSTITUTIONS FOR WOMEN:

Berkeley Claremont School at Hicksville (NY)
The Berkeley School (NY)
Katherine Gibbs School (MA)
Katherine Gibbs School (NY)
Kings College (NC)
The Wood School (NY)

TEACHER PREPARATORY COLLEGES OR SEMINARIES:

Associated Beth Rivkah Schools (NY)
Assumption College for Sisters (NJ)
Ayeleleth Hashachar Teacher's Seminary (NY)
Bais Yaakov Seminary (NY)

Holy Family College (CA)
Long Island Seminary of Jewish Studies for Women (NY)
Mt. Sacred Heart College (CT)
P'nimia Teachers College (NY)

* For complete definition, see Classification of Institutions of Higher Education (1976), A Report of the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education. Briefly, Comprehensives include institutions that offered a Liberal Arts Program and at least one professional or occupational program, such as teacher training or nursing. Many of them offered master's degrees, but all lacked a doctoral program or had an extremely limited doctoral program. In general, private institutions with less than 1,500 students and public institutions with less than 1,000 students in 1976 were not included even though they offered a selection of programs, because they were not regarded as comprehensive with such small enrollments. Such institutions are classified as liberal arts colleges.

IV. Student Characteristics

CHARACTERISTICS AND ATTITUDES OF 1979-80 FRESHMAN WOMEN

The following tables show attitudes and characteristics of 1979-80 college freshmen as reported in the study "The American Freshman: National Norms for Fall 1979," directed by Alexander W. Astin of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program of the Graduate School of Education at the University of California at Los Angeles, and sponsored by the American Council on Education.

The data are based on responses from full-time freshmen entering approximately 362 representative institutions for the first time in fall, 1979. The weighted national norms represent a total student population of 1,713,117, 51.2% of whom are women.

For further information regarding the methodology of the "National Norms," please consult the chapters on stratification and weighting procedures in the preface to Dr. Astin's 1979 report. Briefly, those data meeting minimal quality requirements for inclusion in the 1979 norms were differentially weighted to represent the population of entering freshman women at all higher educational institutions in the United States. The data on women's colleges, however, have not been weighted to represent the universe of women's colleges.

The data for women's colleges are based on responses from women students in 30 women's institutions included in the national sample. These institutions are:

Mills College
Albertus Magnus College
Mount Vernon College
Trinity College
Spelman College
Wesleyan College
Saint Mary College
Midway College
Goucher College
Hood College
Mount Holyoke College
Pine Manor College
Regis College
Simmons College
Smith College
Wheaton College
College of St. Catherine
College of Saint Teresa
Cazenovia College
Russell Sage College
Salem College
Notre Dame College of Ohio
Chatham College
Cedar Crest College
Columbia College
Converse College
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
Sweet Briar College
Maria Regina College
Manor Junior College

Only those women's colleges providing data judged to be representative of their first-time, full time freshman class and included in the norms are included in the data presented here.

FINANCIAL TRENDS AT WOMEN'S COLLEGES 1976 to 1978

The following tables were developed by Toppe Associates using data from the Higher Education General Information Survey (HEGIS) made available to the National Institutes of Independent Colleges and Universities (NIICU). The financial data presented here in a series of tables describe the effects of inflation on various groups of women's colleges in a number of common income and expenditure categories for the period 1976 through 1978.

Using the HEGIS data, the 1976 dollars in each budget category were inflated by two factors to yield a projected amount for 1978. These two factors were: (1) higher education inflation (as reported by the HIGHER EDUCATION PRICE INDEX) and calculated at 13.6% for the period 1976-1978; and (2) an enrollment factor built from the actual percentage increase in FTE enrollments for the years under study.

Finally, actual 1978 HEGIS budget data were compared to the projected figures to determine whether the budgets of women's colleges had changed in constant terms. A number of key financial ratios were calculated for both 1976 and 1978.

FINANCIAL INDICATORS - REVENUES

There are four key ratios that can be built from revenue data: tuition fee revenues per FTE (TFR/FTE); total current fund revenues per FTE (TCFR/FTE); endowment per FTE (END/FTE); and tuition and fees revenue as a percent of total current fund revenues (TFR/TCFR). These ratios are presented in the tables that follow.

FINANCIAL INDICATORS - EXPENDITURES

Four key ratios can be built from HEGIS expenditure data: educational and general expenditures per FTE (E & G/FTE); mandatory transfers as a percent of educational and general expenditures (MNT/E & G); total current fund expenditures per FTE (TCFE/FTE); and the balance between expenditures and revenues (EXP/REV). These ratios are presented in the following tables.

NOTE: There are advantages and disadvantages to a constant dollar approach to financial assessments in higher education. On the positive side, such analysis gives an absolute measure of whether or not colleges have been able to keep pace with inflationary factors. Unfortunately, these measures assume that quality remains constant; that is, these measures are insensitive to changes in quality which might render the measurements invalid as well as to fiscal restraints which might be accomplished without changes in quality.

* See A Classification of Institutions of Higher Education (1976), A Report of the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education. Briefly, these colleges scored 1030 or more on a selectivity index developed by Alexander W. Astin or they were included among the 200 leading baccalaureate-granting institutions in terms of number of their graduates receiving Ph.D.'s at 40 leading doctorate-granting institutions from 1920 to 1966. The distinction between a liberal arts college and a comprehensive institution is not always clear-cut. Some of the institutions in this group have modest occupational programs but a strong liberal arts tradition.

* For complete definition, see A Classification of Institutions of Higher Education (1976), A Report of the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education. Briefly, these institutions include all the liberal arts colleges that did not meet the criteria for inclusion in the group of liberal arts I colleges. Again, this distinction between "liberal arts" and "comprehensive" is not clear-cut for some of the larger colleges in this group and is necessarily partly a matter of judgement on the part of the Council.

* Technical Notes: Each of the percentages shown in the first four columns of this table reflects the year-to-year change in total voluntary support for a core group of institutions that participated in the Survey of Voluntary Support of Education in both of the two years indicated; the figures in parentheses are the numbers of institutions in these groups. The four-year percentage changes shown in the right-hand column were obtained by linking the four year-to-year changes for each class of institution.

The reliability of these estimates of the percentage change in voluntary support between 1974-75 and 1978-79 varies from one class of institution to another. In general, the larger the number of institutions in each year's core group in relation to the total number of institutions in that class, the more reliable the estimate.

*In every Survey, each institution is classified in the category appropriate to its status in that year. Since the status of many institutions has changed over the years, the data by category is not strictly comparable from one Survey to another. Note: The year-to-year changes shown in this table are not all of equal significance. The total amount reported by any one class of institution from any one class of donor is subject to erratic behavior due to major fund-raising drives, the timing of corporate and foundation programs, large bequests and other non-recurring influences. This is particularly true of the smaller groups of institutions and the smaller dollar figures.

ABOUT THE WOMEN'S COLLEGE COALITION

THE WOMEN'S COLLEGE COALITION is a voluntary organization of 71 women's colleges nationwide. Members come from 23 states and the District of Columbia, and include public and private, independent and church-related, and two and four-year colleges.

PURPOSE The Coalition functions as an advocate and information resource for women's colleges. It is primarily concerned with examining ways in which women's colleges work within the education community to support the intellectual, professional and personal development of women today.

Through a research project supported by the Ford Foundation, the Coalition is working to develop a data base on the country's undergraduate colleges for women. The Ford project also supports the Coalition in functioning as a clearinghouse for research studies that have significant bearing on women's colleges, and as a repository of materials on women's colleges.

Topics of particular interest to the Coalition include: the role of women's colleges as resources on women and women's affairs; curricular focus on women/women's studies; the learning environment at women's colleges; the advancement of women in teaching, administrative and trustee positions; and the public policy concerns of women's colleges.

ORGANIZATION The Coalition was founded in 1972 as a project of the Association of American Colleges. It is governed by an Executive Committee of nine member presidents, chaired by Sr. Dorothy Ann Kelly, President of the College of New Rochelle.

PROFILE OF WOMEN'S COLLEGES - Volume I (May 1980)

The following are the highlights of Profile of Women's Colleges, the first in a series of publications resulting from a two-year data collection project undertaken by the Women's College Coalition with support from The Ford Foundation.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE STUDY

NUMBER OF INSTITUTIONS:

- There are 117 women's colleges in the United States, located in 26 states and the District of Columbia. In 1978-79, their total headcount enrollment was 123,339 and their alumnae body numbered roughly 1,000,000.

ENROLLMENT:

- Enrollments grew steadily at women's colleges over the last decade. Overall headcount enrollment for 1970-1978 was up 19.8%, reflecting significant increases in every type of women's institution - in the four-year colleges (+18.1%), and the two-year (+40.2%), in the catholic colleges (+24.6%) and the non-catholic colleges (+18.5%), in small (+8.7%), medium (21.9%), and large (+28.6%) colleges.

- The increase is accounted for by virtually all types of students: full-time and part-time, undergraduate and graduate, and first professional and unclassified.

LEADERSHIP:

- 65% of all women's college presidents are women, compared to 7.5% nationally.

FACULTY:

- Women faculty at women's colleges are well represented at all ranks, accounting for 55% of the total faculties, 43% of all full professors and 49% of all associate professors (vs. 25%, 11% and 19% respectively, of the professoriate at other four-year institutions).

STUDENTS:

- The population at women's colleges is somewhat more ethnically diverse than the female population of colleges and universities in general. There are slightly more black students (11.2% at women's colleges vs. 9.0% at all institutions), double the percentage of orientals (2.2 vs. 1.1), and significantly more hispanics (1.8 vs. 1.0).

- Freshman women at women's colleges are ambitious and are nearly twice as likely as all freshman women to plan to become physicians, lawyers, or Ph.D's.

- Freshman women at women's colleges are entering new fields and are more than twice as likely as freshman women in general to plan majors in economics, biology, chemistry or other life sciences.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT:

- Women's colleges are heavily supported by a large and loyal alumnae body - whose giving accounts for 42% of total voluntary support at these colleges.

- Women's colleges received more than $20 million in 1977-78 from businesses, corporations and private foundations. Women's colleges have not, however, been supported by these donors at the level of other colleges and universities.
